LLOYD GEORGE SAYS HE STANDS FOR THE PEOPLE

Must Decide Whether Party or Nation Comes First, Former Premier Says in Address to Coalitionists Today.

DECLARES CONSERVATIVES ENCOURAGING PARTY STRIFE

By Assosiated Press.

LEEDS, England, Oct. 21.—David Lloyd George, retiring prime minister, speaking at a great meeting of Coalitionists here today, declared, "the banner of party strife had been hoisted at a recent meeting of Conservatives which voted against continuing the coalition. It is for the people of this country," he exclaimed, "to decide whether the party or the nation comes first. I stand for the people."

Those who expected a sensational announcement from the retiring premier were disappointed. There was no suggestion of forming a new party. The assorted Treaty of Versailles has become a "charter of human liberty to tens of millions of people today. Its first clauses established the League of Nations," which he termed "the Great Human Charter that will be attuned more and more as the years go by."

LOCAL RED CROSS TO START DRIVE FOR $4000 BUDGET

W. S. Anderson, President, Tells of Work, Urges Middlesboro People To Support Coming Campaign.

WORK HERE WILL BE ENLARGED NEXT YEAR

The local chapte rof the American Red Cross is preparing to launch, November 11, a drive for $4000 to cover the budget for the coming year. The work is to be enlarged, particularly through project and relief work, this year. and although the chapter can not afford to increase the staff just now, Miss Marx will be given all assistance possible.

The following letter, written by W S. Anderson, is an exhortation for support in the coming campaign:

The American Red cross is an organization of which our country is justly proud. Composed of a voluntary army of more than 4,000,000 men and women, it is dedicated to a noble purpose, the alleviation of suffering mankind, and the story of its achievements speaks for itself. In order that this organization may continue faithful service and bring assistance to suffering humanity, in the various crises which arise from time to time, it needs constant encouragement and support.

It has ever been the just and proud boast of America that she has never been wanting in generosity in any need and I am confident that Middlesboro citizens will not fail to respond to help the Red Cross put over its program, thereby enabling it to continue its ministrations to the unfortunate and suffering. Every progressive community should put forth its best efforts to organize and sustain a local chapter.

So, I would urge upon all of you who have not already become affiliated with the Red Cross to do so at once, and to those of you who have permitted your membership to lapse to renew it. Become and remain a part of this national monument, this great agency for good that always wants to be ready, is always willing to spring in and offer its aid in peace and in war, in waging its fight against disease and disaster, misery and suffering not only in full measure of devotion among our own people, but also among those of afflicted lands elsewhere.

The report of the National Committee on Red Cross nursing service has an item of great significance. During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, there had been an increase in the enrollment of nurses of 1068, making the entire enrollment on July 1, 38,855. It is perhaps permissable now to refer to this magnificent body of trained women as a tremendous element of preparedness in case of the tragedy of war should again break upon civilization. A large number of these nurses are now engaged in school and community work. The Red Cross has no other asset that compares with this, which after all, is the foundation of its existence.

As a direct result of the efficient and capable nurse in our city schools, last year there were over 900 defects corrected. Who can estimate the value of this to those children in years to come? We have been spending millions of dollars in the production of things, fruit and grain and animals, in the production of which there there is profit. We have bent our highest energies to the perfection of property because it had a money value. But we have forgotten that on the basis of a most simple logic, the highest duty of the state is to make possible the production of normal, healthy children and the next highest is the conservation and protection of human life. Yet the country over, the average community spends $2 per capita on fire and police protection. It spends $9.00 per capita on education. It spends 29 cents per capita on the protection of the health and vitality of its people. The hope of tomorrow lies in making health contagious instead of disease.

In the hands of the child repost the destinies of humanity, and it is only by gaining his allegiance that you can feel confident for the future and assured that the work you cherish shall bear the stamp of immortality. The Junior Red Cross is a world movement, enrolling in behalf of the Red Cross one of the greatest forces in the world, one of the surest means of one day realizing its aim, for by enlisting in the cause of humanity the generous enthusiasm of the world's youth, a new impulse, new color, and a new program, will be given to the Red Cross movement in all countries and in all classes. Let us organize a Junior Red Cross

In a few days the committee will call on you for your subscription and we hope every one will—respond liberally and whole-heartedly.

Sincerely,

W. S. ANDERSON.

Chairman Middlesboro Chapter.

The Woman Behind Kemal Pasha; Attacked Turkish Evils and Won

By Milton Bronner

London, Oct. 21.—The woman behind Kemal.

That's what they call Halid Edib Hanoum, one of the first Turkish women of all time to make her mark in history.

She is said to be the person who has inspired Kemal Mustapha with his grandiose dreams of a revered Turkey astraddle of the straits of the Bosphorus, with one foot in Europe and the other in Asia It is she who, is supposed to be constantly whispering in his ears the battle cry Turkey all Turkey for the Turks!

Romantic legend is already busy with her story and it is already hard to sift fact from fiction. It is known that she is the daughter of a Turk who was an official at the Yildiz Kiosk, the home of the sultans at Constantinople. It is known that she was one of the first real Turkish women to be graduated from the American college at Constantinople.

She is quoted as saying:

"In the most approved Turkish housewifely fashion, I can go to a market and pick out a female slave for the household and know the exact price to pay for her. And I can go to a European butcher shop like any European woman and select the proper joint of beef or mutton.

"As a Turk I can select a dancing girl and know what her services are worth. As a European I can assume European dress, play tennis, dance in the Western fashion, play the piano, sing the latest London and Paris successes and hold fluent conversations in French, Italian and English."

When very young, she is only 32, now, she married a Turkish journalist and they have several children. During the war she was a friend and confidant of the all-powerful Turkish triumvirate, Enver, Taalat and Djmal. And it is at this point that romantic legend steps in.

There are three separate yarns as to how she happened to join the Angora forces

LEGEND NO. 1: For her connection with the antiArmenian activaties of Djmel Pasha, she was exiled by the allies to the Isle of Malta whence she escaped to Angora.

LEGEND NO. 2: The Turkish government at Constantinople suspecting her sympathies with the Nationalists under Kemal, was preparing to arrest her for treason. But she struck up an acquaintance with a movie operator who was also an aeronaut and one fine morning she sailed away above the white clouds of the Turkish capital and landed safely in Asia Minor.

LEGEND NO. 3: The allies wanted to keep her in Constantinople, but one moonlit night she was ferried across the Bosphorus to the Asiatic shore, where she was met by Nationalists who piloted her past the English lines and to safety.

She soon displayed a leading role at Kemal's capital. As a Turkish woman who had discarded the Turkish veil and urged other Turkish women to do so, as the author of a novel which attacked many of the evils of the harem system, as one who nurses the wounded Turks in spite of Mohammedan teachings, she captured the fancy of the women and taught them to read and write

She became the champion of the new slogan for women in Islam, saying, Without emancipated women, Turkey will never become reunited.

Recognizing her powers, Kemal broke all records by making her minister of education in his first cabinet As a cabinet minister she has gone far beyond supervising education. She has been the most trusted of Kemal's advisers.

STATE PROMISES TO FIX STREETS

Not to Scarify But to Fill Holes of East End Streets and Make Passable.

That the state will take steps to have the East End streets put in better condition for fall travel as soon as possible. was the information given Judge J. F. Bosworth yesterday by Hugh Asher of Pineville, member of the state highway commission.

The streets will not be scarified as previously planned, Mr. Asher said. Engineers sent here to investigate the matter reported that it would cost about $3000 to do this and, as the state intends to make new streets as soon as the weather allows it next spring, they did not advise spending that amount of money at this time. They propose, however, to get slag and fill up the biggest holes and to coal patch places in the street where it can be done advantageously. This will make the streets passable for the winter.

The East End streets of Middlesboro have been a sore care for some time and any thing to alleviate the difficulty is indded welcome, Middlesboro people feel.

PLANS FOR COUNTRY CLUB GOLF TOURNAMENT CHANGED

Plans for the city golf tournament to be held some time this fall have been changed but, F. P. Scales, president of the Middlesboro Country Club, the tournament will be held yet. The first proposal, to raise a generous sum by subscription to pay for the trophies, has been abandoned, and now the club proposed to make each member who enters the tournament pay a nominal fee. The trophies, then, will be bought with this money.

The country club last week completed negotiations for a $20,000 loan from the Commonwealth Life Insurance Co The club as a corporation has liquidated and reorganized, lumping all indebtedness with one company. The new loan makes some surplus which will be put into the grounds.

By Associated Press

NEW BRUNSWICK, Oct. 21.—Working independently of other investigators, Prosecutor Stricker today prepared to question five persons in an effort to obtain sufficient evidence to warrant an arrest in the Hall-Mills murder case.

Investigators believe they have established a motive for the slaying of the Rev. Edward Hall and his choir leader, Mrs. Eleanor Mills, but say no arrests have been made because some link in the chain of evidence is not properly forged.

CHRISTIAN REVIVAL CLOSES TOMORROW

"The Outstretched Hand" Rev. Clarkes Sermon Last Night—Baptism Ordinance Tomorrow.

"The Outstretched Hand" was the subject of the Rev. W. J. Clarke's sermon at the Christian Church last night. Special music consisted of a duet by Mr. and Mrs T. R. Hill and a solo by Miss Edith Elliott. These splendid evangelistic services, which have been going on at this church for almost two weeks, close tomorrow night.

That the hand of God was outstretched to welcome, to guide and to mark the way were brought out in particular by the speaker in his sermon. In explaining this last point the Rev. Clarke said that we should meet temptation as did Jesus Christ. When he was tempted he first sought spiritual direction, then put the temptation away and went to another environment, and then went for spiritual aid again.

The evangelist's subject tonight is "The Book of Life." Miss Elliott will sing "In the Garden." The subject in the morning will be "The Message of the Church of Christ," and for tomorrow night, "What Are You Worth?" The ordinance of baptism will be administered after the sermon tomorrow night.

The yellow woods that yesterday were still
Are dripping by angry winds and everywhere
A flaming splendor, an immense despair
Await the work of Winter's ancient will;
Great battles thunder through the bare.
The laborers pause to listen unaware
That angels stand above the burning hill.
And when the storm is hushed, they take no heed
Of Gabriel bending near an orchard close,
Where one lone robin lingers on to sing;
Oh that more softly than the winged seed
Word has fallen; but the lorn earth knows,
And all the autumn meadows dream of Spring.

HONEYMOONERS ABROAD

JACK AND WIFE SEE NAPLES' WONDERS

BY ZOE BECKLEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JACK DURYEA, with his bride EDNA, has been sent by his employers to Europe to investigate secretly the suspected duplicity of the firm's foreign representative, COUSINS. Thus Jack expects to mix business with his honeymoon. Arriving at Naples Jack and his bride see Cousins coming in a revenue cutter to meet them.

Go On With The Story

One of the first to set foot on board the Roma was Monsieur Cousins And sighting Jack the rushed forward his arms extended, face alight, dramatic welcome in his manner He seized Jack's hand and almost kissed him

"My dear Meester Duryea!" And ees thees—"

'My wife,' Jack presented.

Cousins with expert gallantry kissed both her hands.

"I am charmed, charmed beyond words! And on your honeymoons — ah, how happy you shall be! I, Cousins, your humble frien', know this Europe like my own hand and all its offerings of pleasure. I have everything planned out for you. Do not bother your heads in the least It is all arranged. Come!"

Almost literally he rushed them off their feet. He seemed to have lubricated every possible wheel. Their baggage was rushed through the customs

Their landing was expedited and they found themselves on the picturesque quay, their ears dinned with the clamor of rival drivers of flea-bitten horse drawn street cabs

Cousins shouldered a path through the gestilating hackmen and led the Duryeas to a big new, shining green motor, a liveried chauffeur at the wheel, th only car in the motley collection of vehicles

"Your bridal chariot!" Cousins bragged as they were whirled through the crookedest streets, most peopled, most colorful, noisiest and by turns the most picturesquely filthy streets conceivable

Edna was so thrilled with the color and beggary, the strident noise and the brooding poetry of the scenes thru which she was passing that she found no time to wonder where the splendid bridal chariot had come from.

But when she turned to her husband to share with him the excitement of a steep street in which a riot of flowers in baskets clashed with another riot of colored rags of devil may care poverty she saw his thoughts were less on the scenes about him than on their guide.

"You shall see!" Cousins was saying. "You shall thrill! We go to the Bertolini Palace Hotel, where I live, where I have a suite for you. where you look from the mountain top down on Naples and the bay and Vesiuvius!

"This afternoon we ride through the city. Tonight the opera. Tomorrow Capri. Wednesday Amalfi and Sorrento. The next day Pompeii and Mount Vesuvius. The day after that we leave for Rome—"

Jack cleared his throat.

"We may have to leave room for a day in our Naples office," he said "I certainly can't leave without a look at our business here, can I?"

A quick change came over Cousins' face. The smoothness of velvet in his manners for a moment changed to a something hard like steel.

"Ah, perhaps," he evaded. If this so miserable strike is over by then! I am desolate, M. Duryea, but our Naples office at this moment is closed. There is a strike on there!"

TODAY'S RECIPES

Butterfly Sleeves, Bertha Collars on New Dancing Frocks

The modern college girl may wear, and does, flat-heeled shoes, wool-jersey dresses, plain-tailored suits, sweaters and skirts, but there is one article in her wardrobe that is exempt from all utilitarian rules.

That's her dancing frock of course. Here are two she'd like for the winter parties and hops.

Tiny butterfly wings of sleeves decorate one of them and a new neckline helps to make it as modish as possible.

The other has a deep Bertha collar of lace as costly as one's purse can buy. Both rejoice in the dashing swing skirts cut to drop on each side.

New Collar Effect

One of the seasons most interesting collar effects is shown here. It is plainly a compromise between a high and the low, but such a compromise as only an artist could have made. Second in interest are the diagonal bands of black braid, and the embroidered belt, which add to the decorative quality of the frock.

Side Trails Are Latest For Evening Gowns

A long train that falls from one hip and trails gracefully from the side is considered very new for the evening gown.

On the other side of the frock is the side drape without which no dress can be fashionable this winter.

And of course the drapes are fastened with a cabochon ornament. All is as it should be

Velvet is the favored material, the exquisitely supple French chiffon velvet which is indescribable and unforgetable.

Amber is one of the most fashionable shades and golden brown runs second.

Next to velvet in popularity are the metal fabrics with overdresses of beaded nets, chiffons or laces.

Fur Coats

Rich and elegant coats of broadtail of baby lamb are effectively collared with sable or chinchilla. The smartest fur coats are draped as softly and beautifully as fabrics.

COUNTY LINE COMPLICATES THE FIGHT AGAINST SLAYER

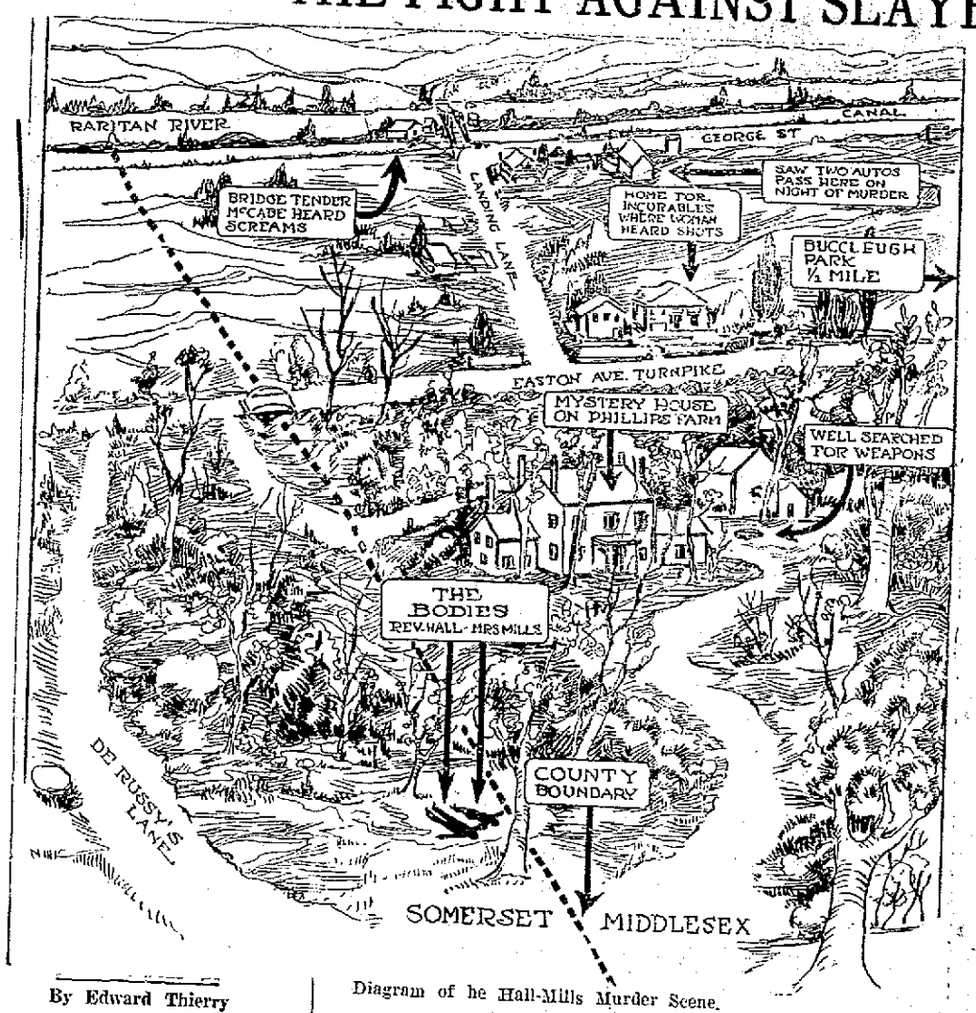

Diagram of he Hall-Mills Murder Scene.

By Edward Thierry

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 21. — Where did the double murder of Rev. E. W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills take place?

Which county—Middlesex or Somerset?

These questions will be uppermost in bringing to trial the murders of the church rector and choir singer.

The bodies were found in Somerset county, a few steps across the boundary line of Middlesex county. The line runs from Raritan river south along a tiny brook that crosses Easton avenue, on the outskirts of New Brunswick. It bisects the deserted Philips farm near De Russy's Lane, and where the brook disappears and the dry bed ends it is merely an imaginary line through the thickets.

Were the victims shot down at the spot under the crabapple tree in Somerset where their bodies were found?

If so, were the slayers standing in Middlesex? Were the shots fired across the county line? If so, legal complications may follow.

One bullet pierced the rector's head and probably killed him instantly. Three bullets struck Mrs. Mills in the head, but did not pierce her skull. This, thinks Detective George D. Totten of Somerset, may prove that Rev. Hall was shot first at close range and Mrs. Mills at longer range, perhaps while she was running in an effort to escape.

The bullets must have killed her instantly, yet her throat was cut. Was before or after the shooting? Probably afterwards thinks Detective Fred David of Middlesex.

This mutilation, according to the theory of Miss Florence North, lawyer detective working as the friend of 16 year old Charlotte Mills, daughter of the murdered woman, was in fiendish jealousy over the choir singer's voice.

Another supposition is that the victims may have been slain in or near the deserted house 10 yards away. Or in the barn. Or in neighboring Buccleugh Park. Where they then carried in automobiles and laid out under the crabapple tree?

This would support the theory of Fred McCabe, and his wife, Katherine McCabe. The former is bridgetender at the Landing Lane bridge across the canal and river, a quarter of a mile from the spot where the bodies were found. They agree that at 11:40 the night of the crime they heard a woman's screams, three screams, the last a piteous wail, a few minutes apart.

The first screams came from over the hill in Middlesex county. The last seemed to come from Somerset. And a woman neighbor in George street, near Landing Lane, says she saw two automobiles whizz around the corner from the direction of the deserted farm. Another woman in the Home for Incurables, in Easton avenue across from the farm, says she heard shots.

Yellow and orange are used in combination with brown very frequently in the fall blouses and costume suits. Several smart hats have been developed in this stunning color scheme.

A THOUGHT

We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.—Romans 15:1.

LLOYD GEORGE, THE PHOENIX

Like Hamlet, Mr. Lloyd George is the hero of his own funeral. But unlike Hamlet he does not die in the last act. No shortness of breath is yet to be observed about the former Prime Minister of Britain. Although he has resigned the primacy which he held longer and in more stressful times than almost any other British statesman, he remains the central figure. In no sense does he go into retirement.

Today's dispatches reflect this curious and interesting fact about the most vital political personality of the age. What event in England is most awaited? Is it the personnel of the fatedly brief Cabinet of Mr. Bonar Law? Is it the date of the general elections? Is it the revisions in the Near East programme which the new government will make? Not at all. What Britain awaits is Mr. Lloyd George's speech at Leeds. He is about as dead as a hungry Bengal tiger.

This supreme vitality and commanding public importance, due to intelligence, resourcefulness and personality, is what makes Mr. Lloyd George the most interesting man on the world stage. Officially he has gone into retirement with Messrs. Wilson, Clemenceau and Orlando, who, with him, fought the great war and drew up the Pact of Versailles. But actually he is more on the scene than ever. It is in opposition that the Welshman flourishes.

Mr. Wilson is doomed by ill health to permanent retirement, and by his own apparent inclination, to silence. Signor Orlando comes and goes in politics, but he has no personality that appeals to the world public. M. Clemenceau is a great and interesting figure, but his age and public position in France have apparently checked him finally. But Mr. Lloyd George, strong, well, cunning and brilliant, remains in the thick of the battle. He may be Prime Minister soon again. He may decide to harass the new governments and promote his early radicalism.—Louisville Times.

THE MATTER OF SUICIDE

Doctors are more apt to suicide than members of any other profession. This is revealed by the latest suicide records, which show doctors at the head of the list among professional men.

Discussing this in American Medicine magazine, Dr. S. Dana Hubbard of New York City reaches the conclusion that occupational strain is greatest in the medican profession.

A physician is in constant danger, dealing with diseases in their most advanced stages, especially the incurable kind.

An unthinking public overlooks this meritorious service. You never heard of a doctor backing out of a case because he fears the malady, however dread. A lesson in courage and self-sacrifice for the good of humanity.

In proportion to numbers engaged in the profession, the suicide rate for doctirs last year was not much higher than among lawyers.

Suicides last year totaled 86 doctors and 57 lawyers. But there are many more doctors than lawyers.

Both professions require courage and the will-power of endurance. They have this in common: years of costly education, then years of comparative inactivity, sitting around waiting until they have a paying business built up.

Forty-five seems to be the average age of suicide. Hence it must be the danger year, the blackest hour that comes just before the dawn of success.

At 45 a man is beginning to grow weary, after years of dogged effort, and is apt to become discouraged unless constantly on his guard.

Discouragement brings brooding. And brooding may result in the fit of temporary insanity in which most suicides occur.

The suicide ignores the lesson of countless centuries, this being the lesson: There is always a way out of any trouble. No trouble endures for good. Luck changes as surely as the ocean tide turns.

The suicide is like a man who, at 4 in the morning, gives up hope that the sun will never rise again.

A mighty lesson for all of us, this truth, that it is always blackest just before dawn. It is part of the wisdom we have inherited from the past. And it is eternally true.

THE INDOOR SPORT

By Berton Braley

MY golf is a joke and my tennis is worse,
And few people swim quite as badly as I;
But though to such sports I am far from averse,
I don't really shine until summer's gone by.
Then me for the place where the ivories click,
And also where tenpins excitingly fall;
At sports such as these I'm decidely slick,
I swing a mean cue and I roll a mean ball!

I'M versatile, too, in the sports that I know,
My pinochle game is exceeded by few.
At checkers I'm not at all stupid or slow,
I'll say that I click a good domino, too:
I like to get busy at jack-pot or stud,
With hard-boiled old stagers, set-visaged and gruff,
Who hold the cards close and who go out for blood,
Who boost a steep raise and who throw a smooth bluff.

THE summer's all right, and I fall for its charm,
But autumn and winter are more to my taste,
When one can loaf 'round in a room that is warm,
And play at a game without sweating or haste;
I like the blue smoke that is thick as a cloud,
I like the male laughter that booms through the air,
My record outdoors doesn't do me so proud,
But indoors—oh boy, I'm a wiz and a bear!

THE REFEREE

BY ALBERT APPLE.

Fairies

Conan Doyle stirs up much argument by his announcement that he believes in fairies. He goes as far as to publish nature photographs in which fairies are shown, about the size of butterflies and with the same kind of wings.

It would be a mistake to investigate this from the angle of trick photography. Whether fairies exist or not, doesn't matter. It's a good thing to believe in them. Life would be drab without such illusions as fairies, Santa Claus and air castles.

Do you remember your heartache when disillusioned on the subject of Santa Claus?

Bare-Backs

Richard N. Speaight, organizer of the international photographers' exhibit held in London, comments that women are getting under cover.

Modesty is coming back to modern photography, he says, and there is a noticeable desire on the part of women to abandon bareness.

It is part of the reaction against jazz life.

Hega

Scientists, digging in buried ruins, discover that the Egyptians 5,500 years ago made beer of red barley and called it Hega.

They passed their discovery on to Europe by way of Greece. Pliny wrote: So exquisite is the cunning of mankind in gratifying their vicious appetites that they have invented a method to make water itself produce intoxication.

So the home brew in the cellar has a family tree 55 centuries old.

Look!

An auto that was used 2,300 years ago in Alexandria, Egypt, is described by Dr. James H. Breasted of the University of Chicago.

Records found by Breasted show that this ancient machine made only 2 trips a year, hauling the statute of a goddess back and forth between her summer and winter temples, a mile apart.

The motive power was a sort of huge spring, like a child's toy auto. When released, it shot the car to its destination as if a modern speeder were driving. Not so bad for 2300 years ago.

Housewives

American housewives, if paid the market rates for work they do in the homes, would have a combined income of ten billion dollars a year. This is the estimate of Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Her estimate is too low. It should be multiplied by at least six, for the work done in the home surely balances work outside, and the latter this year gives the nation an income of $60,000,000,000.

After all, it is rather futile to attempt to put a money value on services that cannot be measured in dollars. The average mother undergoes privations and self-denials that strangers would not shoulder for $10,000 a year.

Paid

The first country to wipe out its World War debt in full is Ocean Island, a Pacific isle that shows up on the map as a pinpoint just south of the equator.

This little island voluntarily rushed to the assistance of New Zealand. It contributed an army of six men. The war debt which is now wiped out totaled only about $17,000. Nevertheless, it was a big strain for such a small community.

What's Going On in World

Week's Chief Events Briefly Told

Shall Dry Law Be Changed?

As the November elections draw near it becomes plainer and plainer that prohibition still is a political question of much interest in this country.

Ohio, Illinois and Massachusetts will decide by vote whether or not to permit more than 1-2 of 1 per cent alcohol in drinks which may be sold lawfully in those states.

Even if they vote YES prohibitionists say it will make no difference, because the federal law, which is higher than any individual state law, fixes 1-2 of 1 per cent as the limit. The anti prohibitionists answer, never mind, a vote of Yes will show anyway that the people do not like the federal laws, which will be a step toward getting it changed.

In all the states where congressmen are to be elected, the candidates have been classified on the one side or the other.

Nobody argues for the return of the old saloon, but the prohibitionists say it will come back, sooner or later if the ANTIS win. The ANTIS deny this, declaring they only want to allow people to drink light wine and beer in their homes if they choose. If they could do so, the ANTIS assert, it would be easier to suppress stronger drinks, which they point out, are consumed in great quantities now because it is impossible to get anything else under a bone dry law.

Many Ships Insist On Drinks

Since Attorney General Daugherty decided that ships from foreign ports may not bring drinks within the three mile limit, even under lock and key, all vessels owned by the government have been dry nor will the United States Shipping Board, which manages them, seek any change in the attorney general's decision.

But American ships owned by private companies insist they have a right to enter and leave our ports with liquor on board, so long as they do not try to land or sell any of it within the three mile limit, and the International Mercantile Marine and the White Star line have obtained orders from a United States judge forbidding official from interfering with them until they have had time to see if the supreme court at Washington agrees with the attorney general.

Foreign companies which own ships visiting the United States take the same position, and the French Line even threatens to appeal to the international court at The Hague, saying the United States government has created a condition which interferes with the freedom of the seas. Besides the French law compels these ships to carry wine for their crews.

Will Ask Congress To Hurry Up

It is said up on good authority in Washington that President Harding has decided to call an extra session of Congress on November 20 to vote on the ship subsidy and anti lynching bills.

Those who favor a ship subsidy take the view that every great nation should have, under its own flag, an adequate merchant fleet, and if such fleet cannot be operated at a profit then the government must make a financial allowance to ship owners sufficient to wipe out their losses and leave them something over to pay them for their trouble in keeping vessels at sea.

Such an allowance is what President Harding desires this country to make, for our ships unquestionably are running at a loss.

Many countries do subsidize their merchant fleets, in some cases by the payment to ship owners of large sums for carrying the overseas mails. In countries like England, where great numbers of people are dependent directly upon business which comes and goes in ships, it is a policy which has strong public support. But in the United States there is a great population living far inland which does not see how it benefits by having vessels on distant oceans and which opposes being taxed to help the owners of these vessels. It is argued, of course, that inlanders do benefit indirectly, yet there are many who cannot see it.

Consequently the ship subsidy bill has numerous opponents and it is uncertain whether it will pass or not.

Supporters of the antilynching bill contend that lynchings occur so frequently in the United States because the lynchers seldom are punished. And they seldom are punished, it is argued because the people of a community where lynching occurs are inclined to stick together, that is to say, if all, or many, were more or less implicated, naturally they do not much inclined to punish themselves.

So, instead of leaving the local courts to deal with lynching cases, the bill proposes to have them dealt with by the United States courts, the judge and the court officials being citizens from places perhaps at a considerable distance from where the lynching occurs.

Not only is provision made for punishing the lynchers, but likewise for the local officials who ought to prevent lynching, if they can; and the county where a lynching occurs is required to pay heavy damages in money to the victim's heirs.

This bill, too, has much opposition and its fate is uncertain.

Looks More Like Peace In East

Kemal Pasha and the allied powers which interfered when the Turks beat the Greeks have signed a peace protocol.

This protocol was agreed on at the Mudania conference. The regular peace meeting, to arrange a treaty, probably will be held in November.

Trouble starts so easily in the Near East that it never is safe to say danger is over. This is especially true since the Turks do not like the protocol very much and continue to trespass on the strip of land near Constantinople which the English insist must remain neutral.

Still, the protocol for peace is reasonably good now.

The protocol requires Greece to surrender Thrace, as far as the Maritza river, to the allies, who in turn, will surrender it to the Turks. All this is to take a month. Even then the Turks will be allowed to send only a limited number of troops into Thrace.

The final treaty undoubtedly will give Thrace to Turkey permanently. Also Constantinople.

The freedom of the straits from the Mediterranean to the Black Sea will be provided for, presumably under international control, so that the waterway may be open to the shipping of all the world.

The Flaming Jewel

By Robert W. Chambers

Copyright 1922 by George H. Doran Company

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Alone in her step-father's camp in the Adirondacks, with

STATE TROOPER STORMONT on guard outside, is beautiful

EVE STRAYER, the nymph of the forests and the sole influence for good in the crime-stained career of her step-father,

MIKE CLINCH Under Eve's pillow was the gem of priceless worth, the Flaming Jewel, first stolen from the

COUNTESS OF ESTHONIA by the international thief

QUINTANA, and stolen in turn from Quintana by Mike Clinch.

And now, outside in the forest men tracked one another with rifles Quintana had returned to regain the jewel. Clinch had sworn to wipe out his gang And there also was

JAMES DARRAGH, under the name of

HAL SMITH, who had sworn to return the gem to the now beggared countess.

Creeping like a snake outside was the murderer,

EARL LEVERETT, who had betrayed first Clinch and then Quintana to gain the jewel for himself. Dreaming of no harm, Eve thought of the new emotion in her heart, her sudden love for Trooper Stormont.

CHAPTER V

She saw him walk away saw his shadow, well-built form fade into the starlit mist.

An almost uncontrollable impulse set her throat and lips quivering with desire to call to him through the night, "I do love you! I do love you! Come back quickly, quickly!—"

The girl turned from the window, looked at the door for a moment, then her face flushed and she walked toward a chair and seated herself, leaving the door unbolted.

For a little while she sat upright, alert, as though a little frightened. After a few moments she folded her hands and sat unstirring, with lowered head, awaiting Destiny

It came, noiselessly. And so swiftly that the rush of air from the violently opened door was what startled her

For in the same second Earl Leverett was upon her in his stockinged feet, one bony hand gripping her mouth the other flung around her, pining both arms to her sides.

"The packet!" he panted "Quick, yeh dirty little cat. "I'll break yeh head off yeh damn neck!"

She bit at the hand that he held crushed against her mouth. He lifted her bodily, flung her onto the bed and, twisting sheet and quilt around her, swathed her to the throat.

Still controlling her violently distorted lips with his left hand and holding her so, one knee upon her, he reached back, unsheathed his hunting knife, and pricked her throat till the blood spurted.

"Now gol ram yeh!" he whispered fiercely, "where's Mike's packet? Yell, and I'll hog stick yeh fur fair! Where is it, you dum thing!"

He took his left hand from her mouth. The distorted, scarlet lips writhed back, displaying her white teeth clenched.

"Where's Mike's bundle?" he repeated, hoarse with rage and fear.

"You rat!" she gasped

At that he closed her mouth again, and again he pricked her with his knife cruelly. The blood welled up onto the sheets

"Now, by God!" he said in a ghastly voice, "answer or I'll hog-stick yeh next time! Where is it? Where! Where!"

She only showed her teeth in answer. Her eyes flamed.

"Where! Quick! Gol ding yeh, I'll shove this knife in behind your ear if you don't tell! Go on. Where is it? It's in this Dump somers. I know it is, don't lie. You want that I should stick you good? That what you want, you dirty little dump-slut? Wemm, then, gol ram yeh, I'll fix yeh like Quintana was aimin' at—"

He slit the sheet downward from her imprisoned knees, seized one wounded foot and tried to slash the bandages

"I'll cut a coupla toes off'n yeh," he snarled, "—I'll hamstring yeh fur keeps!"—struggling to mutilate her while she flung her helpless and entangled body from side to side and bit at the hand that was almost suffocating her.

Unable to hold her any longer, he seized a pillow, to bury the venomous little head that writhed, biting under his clutch.

As he lifted it he saw a packet lying under it.

"By God!" he panted.

As he seized it she screamed for the first time: "Jack! Jack Stormont!"—and fairly hurled her helpless little body at Leverett, striking him full in the face with her head.

Half stunned, still clutching the packet, he tried to stab her in the stomach; but the armor of bedclothes turned the knife, although his violence dashed all breath out of her.

Sick with the agony of it, speechless, she still made the effort; and as he stumbled to his feet and turned to escape, she struggled upright, choking, blood running from the knife pricks in her neck.

With the remnant of her strength, and still writhing and gasping for breath, she tore herself from the sheets and blankets and reeled across the room to where Stormont's rifle stood, threw in a cartridge, dragged herself to the window.

Dimly she saw a running figure in the night mist, flung the rifle across the window sill and fired and fired again—or thought she did. There were too shots.

"Eve!" came Stormont's sharp cry, "what the devil are you trying to do to me?"

His cry terrified her; the rifle clattered to the floor.

The next instant he came running up the stairs, bare headed, heavy pistol swinging, and halted horrified at the sight of her.

"Eve! My God!" he whispered, taking her blood wet body into his arms.

"Go after Leverett," she gasped. "He's robbed daddy. He's running away, out there, somewhere—"

"Where did he hurt you, Eve—my little Eve—"

"Oh, go! go!" she wailed—"I'm not hurt, He only pricked me with his knife. I'm not hurt, I tell you. Go after him! Take your pistol and follow him and kill him!"

"Oh," she cried hysterically, twisting and sobbing in his arms, "don't lose time here with me! Don't stand here while he's running away with dad's money!" And, "Oh—oh—oh!" she sobbed, collapsing in his arms and clinging to him convulsively as he carried her to her tumbled bed and laid her there.

"Dad's money was under my pillow," she wailed. "Leverett tried to make me tell where it was. I wouldn't and he hurt me—"

"How?"

"He pricked me with his knife. When I screamed for you he tried to choke me with the pillow. Didn't you hear me scream?"

"Yes. I came on the jump"

"It was too late," she sobbed, "—too late! He saw the money packet under my pillow and he snatched it and ran. Somehow I found your rifle and fired. I fired twice."

Her only bullet had torn his campaign hat from his head. But he did not tell her.

"Let me see your neck," se said, bending closer.

She bared her throat, making a soft vague complaint like a hurt bird — lay there whimpering under her breath while he bathed the blood away with lint, sterilized the two cuts from his emergency packet, and bound them

He was still bending low over her when her blue eyes unclosed on his.

"That is the second time I've tried it was Leverett. I'd have died if I had killed you"

There was a silence.

"Lie very still," he said huskily. "I'll be back in a moment to rebandage your feet and make you comfortable for the night."

"I can't sleep," she repeated desolately. "Dad trusted his money to me and I've let Leverett rob me. How can I sleep?"

"I'll bring you something to make you sleep."

"I can't!"

"I promise you you will sleep. Lie still"

He rose, went away downstairs and out to the barn, where his campaign hat lay in the weeds, a flat, muddy, shoeless shape sprawling grotesquely in the foggy starlight.

One hand clutched a hunting knife; the other a packet.

Stormont drew the packet from the stiff finger, then turned the body over and flashing his electric torch, examined the ratty visage. what remained of it, for his pistol bullet had crashed through from ear to ear, almost obliterating the trap-robber's features

Stormont came slowly into Eve's room and laid the packet on the sheet beside her.

"Now," he said, "there is no reason for you to like awake any longer I'll fix you up for the night."

Deftly he unbandaged, bathed, and dressed and rebandaged her slim white feet, little wounded feet so lovely, so exquisite that his hand trembled as he touched them.

"How did you get back dad's money?" she asked in an odd, emotionless way as though too weary for further surprises.

"I'll tell you in the morning."

"Did you kill him? I didn't hear your pistol"

"I'll tell you all about it in the morning. Good night, Eve."

As he bent over her, she looked up into his eyes and put both arms around neck.

It was her first kiss given to any man, except Mike Clinch.

After Stormont had gone out, and closed the door she lay very still for a long time.

Then, instinctively, she touched her lips with her fingers; and at the contact, a blush clothed her from brow to ankle.

The Flaming Jewel in its morocco casket under her pillow burned with no purer fire than the enchanted flame glowing in the virgin heart of Eve Strayer of Clinch's Dump

Black-Draught Found Valuable by a Texas Farmer, Who Has Known Its Usefulness Over 30 Years.

Naples, Texas.—"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for years—I can safely say for more than 30 years," declares Mr. H. H. Cromer, a substantial, well-known farmer, residing out from here on Route 3.

"I am 43 years old, and when a small boy I had indigestion and was puny and my folks gave me a liver regulator. Then Black-Draught was advertised and we heard of it.

"I began to take Black-Draught, and have used it, when needed, ever since. I use Black-Draught now in my home, and certainly recommend it for any liver trouble.

"I have given it a thorough trial, and after thirty years can say Black-Draught is my stand-by. It has saved me many sick spells."

Mr. Cromer writes that he is "never out of Black-Draught," and says several of his neighbors prefer it to any other liver medicine. "I always recommend Black-Draught to my friends," he adds.

This valuable, old, powdered liver medicine is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, and has none of the bad effects so often observed from the use of calomel, or other powerful mineral drugs.

PLAN YOUR HALLOWE'EN PARTY NOW; MARION HALE TELLS HOW

The shops are full of first aids to atmosphere, and your Hallowe'en redecorating will be the cheapest sort you can ever attempt.

By Marian Hale

One hears a great deal these days about the importance of atmosphere, but at no time is it more important than at a Hallowe'en party.

In fact, if the atmosphere is right the guests are bound to enter into the spirit of the affair and contribute their own entertainment.

If you must transform your Dutch Colonial or early Italian living room into a witch's den you will find crepe paper, used lavishly, will create amazingly atmospheric changes.

At the same time you purchase the crepe paper get a supply of black cut-outs of owls, witches and cats that come in assorted sizes

You get a very elaborate effect if you cut the paper into inch strips and festoon it from the outer edges of the wall to the central chandelier. Make your window curtains and draperies of the strips, then loop them back after the manner of fabric curtains.

If you have an indirect lighting system your inverted bowl will lend itself nicely to decoration. To cover it with yellow paper, decorated with cats or witches, is a simple method, but a more novel idea is to use the globe for a head, covering it with paper and adding appropriate features.

Then build a body of cardboard and stuff and dress it. Crepe paper fringe makes very effective hair. Long cylinders of orange colored paper, with black cut-outs or figures painted in black or red, used instead of regular shades, give a good effect.

Table decorations may be as simple or as elaborate as one wishes. The table cover may be of figured or plain crepe paper, fringed or plain, with paper napkins to match.

For the centerpiece, the time-honored jack o' lantern, filled with fruit favors or flowers, is always good A witch's caldron, suspended from three sticks, from which toy cats, witches and hobgoblins are crambling, is in keeping with the Hallowe'en spirit. Shocks of corn, apples, pumpkins and autumn leaves way always be used to good advantage

Place favors may be paper flower cups, filled with candy or nuts, or small boxes with figures of witches or cats prancing above them

A novel plan is to write fortunes on pieces of white paper, which will roll into tubes the size of a cigaret. Stick together with a gold band, and tie a yellow ribbon around it.

Fancy caps add to the gayety of such an occasion. They may be of yellow crepe paper, sewed together with yellow crepe paper, or pasted together and fringed.

Very lovely effects may be obtained by the use of paper flowers, patterns and directions for which may now be purchased at the favor counter These are very easy to make Gummed seals with appropriate Hallowe'en markings come by the box and give a festive touch to invitations and place cards.

Paper cups, plates and bonbon boxes may also be bought in a variety of styles

If you live in the city you may buy autumn foliage by the yard and frames for pumpkins when the garden variety is unavailable.

NOTRE DAME CAPTAIN FACES A BIG TASK

Captain Glen Carberry of the Notre Dame football team is a man of action and deeds.

While Carberry will be called upon to face some stiff opposition on the gridiron this fall, he should prove equal to the task.

During the World War Carberry did his bit and saw plenty of fighting.

After serving 11 months with the A. E. F. in France, Glen Carburry was blown up with an ammunition dump and came down to spend three weeks in a hospital

The only bad effect of this happening was a shattered ear-drum. Otherwise he enjoyed the best of health and turned his efforts to law and football at Notre Dame University.

Carberry served as substitute for the all-America Rodger Kiley on the great Notre Dame squad that lost but one game in three seasons. When that team was blasted but four men remained with any experience. Before leaving their alma mater the stars of 1921 looked over the remaining field and chose Carberry to assist Coach Rockne in the building of another Notre Dame machine capable of whipping West Point, Georgia Tech, Nebraska, Carnegie Tech, Indiana, Purdue and five other teams this year.

Pershing's former lieutenant has become the lieutenant of another general, Knute Rockne, in an undertaking which is very serious to Notre Dame men and which will be watched with general interest over the country.

Glen Carberry

Captain Carberry comes from a football family. Two older brothers played on the elevens of the University of Iowa. Two younger brothers are now on the high school team at Ames, Ia.

Curiously enough, all of the Carberrys have played the end position.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts before breakfast if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

YOUR FATE RESTS WITH THE BARBER, GENTS

By Roy Gibbons

Chicago, Oct. 21.—Rudolph Valentino haircuts a la much bear grease, with a slick flat back comb are the new styles in male coiffure for the coming year.

This is announced by Zura C. Shaw president of the International Barber Supply Dealers Association, during an interview in which he discussed what in his opinion is necessary for a well groomed man of the 1922 model.

"The day of the haircut and shave only, is gone for good," quoth Shaw.

"To come to the aid of his party, the modern man must consult his barber at least twice a month, for tress trimming, mud pack, eyebrow pulling and facial massage.

"The man who defies this ruling is declasse, if not passe entirely.

"For the individual who would be up to snuff in every respect, a complete going over with a good hair tonic of not too extravagant perfume value, is most imperative.

"I would recommend all of these for the well-groomed man, and suggest he have them done at least once a week. As the man's hair and face are, so is the man. At least, that's how the world looks at it today, in judging whether he is well groomed or not.

"With all the modern barber machinery and appliances, there is no reason why every male shouldn't be at least attractive.

"The clay pack and eyebrow pulling operations will work wonders, I have seen them snatch beauty back from the grave almost and restore it to men whose looks were ready for the scrap pile.

"Modern men don't need monkey glands. What they need are barbers, and plenty of them.

"Women today no longer look to their sweetheart's attire as the standard whereby to judge him.

"Instead they scent the aroma of his pomade. If that aroma is good, all fares well with the courtship. But if it is cheap, flowers and slow music will follows.

"This is an age of hair and beard manners. And woe to the man who says them nay. He's simply not well groomed. And that's the that of it."

President Shaw hails from Wichita, Kas. Figures which he compiled and presented to the convention of his organization show that last year barbers all over the country took in something like $143,000,000.

Of this amount more than half was spent for the socalled extras which include shampooing and various rubs.

A new machine was exhibited to delegates which simulates a pair of human hands in scalp massage operations.

And various lotions guaranteed to grow hair were also on display.

All of which are employed, so Shaw says, to keep America's male population Well Groomed.

Picturesque Styles

A black velvet suit is handed with mole and has wide ruffles ruffles of lace finishing the long, tight sleeves and falling over the hands. It is one of the season's most picturesque styles.

Pleasant's Costume

A peasant's costume formed the inspiration for a youthful frock composed of a black velvet bodice and a skirt of black, red and white striped wool. The bodice laces with a black cord.

Way to Slenderness

The slender silhouette is achieved by a number of ways this season, but no way is more popular than the long side panels which cut the breadth about the hips and give a graceful hemline.

Organdie And Lace

The most unusual cuffs are seen on any of the new frocks and are of organdie with ruffles of gold lace. They turn back from the wrist to the elbow with a decided flare.

Picturesque Frock

An imported frock of supple velvet in a rich red-purple is cut on very straight lines and has sleeves of chiffon in a much lighter shade than the frock. The sleeves are long and flowing, and the points reach the hemline

SALVATION ARMY BUDGET CAMPAIGN IS NEXT MONTH

Plans for the Salvation Army budget campaign are being made and the campaign will begin a week after the Red Cross. Frank Lee is chairman of this drive. J. W. Allison is captain of the canvassing team and W. S. Anderson is treasurer.

The Salvation Army has this drive every year for funds to finance them. Ninety per cent of the money collected by them is spent in Middlesboro to carry on their charitable work. Ten per cent is sent to division headquarters for supervision and auditorship. Adjutant Cuthbert says that the report that a large sum of the money collected is sent out of town is entirely erroneous and that his books are open for public inspection to show how the money is spent.

FOOTBALL GAME THIS AFTERNOON

Morristown High Promises Stiff Opposition—Local Team Determined To Win.

The football game being played this afternoon between Middlesboro High School and Morristown High School divides interest only with the Centre-Harvard game. Coach Porter said this morning that it would be a hard fight but that Middlesboro was determined to win. Morristown has one of the best teams in eastern Tennessee, having held Knoxville Central High to a score of 0 to 0 last year.

The game was well advertised last night by a parade of cars filled with high school students, who, with horns, drums, cowbells and like instruments, drove up and down the streets inviting the public to the game. The Morristown team and rooters arrived in automobiles yesterday afternoon.

The lineup for the game follows:

Middlesboro	Position	Morristown

WESTERN ROUTE OF DIXIE HIGHWAY IS BEST, ROUTER SAYS

By Associated Press

Chattanooga, Oct. 21.—Tourists enroute south this winter from central and western states should use the western section of the Dixie Highway via Louisville, Bowling Green, Nashville and Chattanooga, according to P. L. Park, secretary of the Chattanooga Automobile Club, who has just completed an inspection of both divisions of the highway.

"The tour disclosed much work now under way of the eastern division between La Follete, Tennessee, and Corbin," Mr. Park said. "As this work cannot be completed this year and as the necessary detours will hardly be negotiable in wet weather, it will be more desirable to use the western section.

"A portion of this route, although rough, will be passable all winter."

LINCOLN STATUE TO BE UNVEILED IN LOUISVILLE OCTOBER 26

By Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 21.—George Gray Barnard's statue of Abraham Lincoln, a gift to the city of Louisville from Mr. and Mrs. Isaac W. Berheim, will be unveiled at noon October 26, on the grounds of the Louisville Free Public Library, where the statue is being placed.

Tentative plans for the unveiling exercises call for the presentation of the statue by Governor Edwin P. Morrow, for the donors, and its acceptance for the library board, legal custodian of the gift, by Mayor Huston Quin.

The statue will not be a duplicate of the Barnard "Lincoln" presented to the city of Cincinnati by Charles P. Taft. The molds in which the Cincinnati Lincoln were cast were destroyed by fire and in the Louisville statue Mr. Barnard has omitted some of the lines which drew adverse criticism to the Cincinnati figure, it is said

FOOTBALL GAMES OF STATE TODAY

By Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Oct. 20.—The eyes of all Kentucky football fans turn toward the East this week where Centre College tomorrow enters what undoubtedly will be their final attempt to wrest victory from the Crimson battlers of Harvard, due to an agreement among the "Big Three," intersectional games probably will not be scheduled in the future.

The Colonels enter the game tomorrow with the best wishes of a majority of Kentuckians regardless of their feelings on strictly inter-state contests. In the past the success of the Colonels on foreign fields has been greeted with cheers by students of other Kentucky colleges.

The University of Kentucky-Georgetown tilt, scheduled to take place in Georgetown tomorrow, will be watched with considerable interest though dope seems to favor the Wildcats on weight and form. The Wildcats have shut out all opponents so far this year and they are entering the game tomorrow determined to keep at least one side of the slate clean. Georgetown has been working hard for the approaching game and observers predict that the Tigers will give the Wildcats a game they will remember.

Transylvania College will take on the Maryville College eleven here tomorrow afternoon and try for a comeback. In both the preceding games the Crimson squad suffered many injuries and in all probability a patched up eleven will enter the game.

Kentucky Wesleyan is scheduled to try Wilmington College at Wilmington, Ohio. The Ohio lads last week ran roughshod over Transylvania and the Wesleyan boys are planning to stop the Ohio onslaught against Kentuckians. Wesleyan last week lost a close game to Georgetown and the Winchester boys have declared that they will take no more chances with opposing elevens.

The rejuvenated Cardinals of the University of Louisville will go up against Franklin College tomorrow. Men injured in the game with Kentucky last week are expected to be back in the lineup and the coaches have announced that a new spirit will be shown by the gridders when they enter the fray against Franklin.

On Tuesday this week the Federal Highway authorities and the State Highway Commission decided to have it built 15 feet wide. This width will give a comfortable passing distance for cars and other vehicles and eliminate the danger of a too narrow road
